You can find Photoshop tutorials on the Web that are generally much more in-depth than what you'll find in this book. After a brief explanation of how layers work in Photoshop, this book provides a set of topics that cover the techniques to get you started manipulating images and create your own creative projects. You'll look at topics such as: Building collages Creating a black-and-white photomontage Creating a layered polaroid Deleting objects from a layer Multiplying colors and increasing or decreasing their saturation Creating a virtual lightbox Using the Liquify tool ## Getting a Cliff's-Eye View of the Layers The basic concept of how Photoshop works is very simple. With layers, you can create, edit, and manipulate any raster image on a screen. The most basic and basic layer is called a _simple layer_. There are several types of layers, the most common of which is called a _masked layer_. When you make changes to a simple layer, the changes are displayed only in the pixels on that simple layer and are not visible on other layers. A mask is like a shield that prevents the changes from being visible on all the other layers, which you call _masked layers_. The practical application of layers is to create different areas of a photograph — such as different elements of an image — that can be combined and manipulated separately. Like compounding, combining images creates entirely new images. Layers in Photoshop can be combined together to make an image on the computer. Combining layers, like combining different parts of an image, gives you the ability to create unique edits. In Figure 2-1, three layers are visible; the lower two layers are masked. The layers are combined to create a new image. Photoshop layers enable you to add or subtract layers to a digital image. You can add any number of layers at any time to a single image. If you apply an adjustment to a layer, that layer is separate from the layer that is currently on top of it. This means that if you apply a color adjustment to a layer, the layer will show a change in the image, but that change won't affect the layer that's on top of the change.

Early imaging biomarkers in the anti-tumor activity of anti-CD19 CAR T cells - WOLF study. This is the first study conducted in a healthy subject group evaluating if early imaging biomarkers in T-cells could distinguish patients that have achieved complete response vs. partial response/no response to anti-CD19 CAR T cells. Whole-body PET/CT imaging was performed in 47 subjects who received 2 infusions of CART cells expressing the anti-CD19 CAR (CART19) followed by anti-CD19 CAR T cells. Attenuation correction CT scans were acquired at the same time. PET/CT scans were acquired at baseline, 24, 72 h after the first infusion (CART19), and approximately 2 days prior to the second infusion (CART19). CART19 showed clinical response in 21 of 24 patients. Early imaging biomarkers analysis showed significantly higher [18F]fluorodeoxyglucose (FDG) uptake in response to CART19 therapy in groups of patients with complete response, partial response, or no response. There was a significant difference in average standardized uptake values (SUV) in response to CART19 between response groups (P = 0.002). In addition, the maximum SUV increased significantly after 2 days of therapy, regardless of response status. A receiver operating characteristic analysis was performed and showed an area under the curve (AUC) of 0.83 for the maximum SUV difference between CART19 responders (complete or partial response) and non-responders (no response). Maximum SUV and [18F]FDG uptake on PET/CT can predict patient responses to anti-CD19 CAR T cells with a specificity and sensitivity of approximately 85%. the ADEA as part of the Rehabilitation Act. Furthermore, the EEOC is charged with interpreting and enforcing the ADEA's provisions. See 29 C.F.R. Sec. 1626.6. We find, therefore, that the interests implicated in the Rehabilitation Act are sufficiently related to the ADEA to justify the use of the provision. The ADEA was not intended merely to supplement, but rather to replace the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. 29 U.S.C. Sec. 633a. See American Mfr. Ass'n v. EEOC, 501 F.2d 357, 363 (2d Cir.1974). It is our view that the two statutes are closely related, and the fact that
