What's New In?

Pinckney is just the kind of guy you would run into on a flight to Jackson Hole. He's the kind of guy who would quiz you about what makes a good Christmas party and never mind the fact that it was getting dark when we finally arrived at the Sage hotel and restaurant, where we had been given the the best table in the house. Pinckney doesn't give a hoot about the mountain view or the cocktails. He's all about the homegrown flavor. And I have to admit, he was right. Coupled with a local chef and his family behind the bar, the food at Sage was outstanding. Two of our four courses were paired with beer made from local ingredients. And the first, a duck confit, was served with a chili beer cocktail. Two courses later, we were served a mushroom soup. It was so good. The mushrooms were seasonal and had a variety of colors and shapes, and it had a lot of the lovely clean mushroom flavors I had hoped to find when I first asked my French teacher for help with the anatomy lessons, because I hadn't had access to those mushrooms. Pinckney never tried any of the cocktails he served us. A cocktail is his domain, as he is at this stage of the game in life. When we were ready to leave, he made small talk about the music scene in town, how the weather looked and the importance of a local crew working for you when you're bringing in special guests. I mentioned that the scene was really great around Nick Drake's Bar, and he just looked at me like I had just told him I thought he was an alcoholic. Then he paid the bill and we were out the door. I'll let you know what I think of the wine for his upcoming party, but I have a feeling that Pinckney will be pleased. Pity the poor POTUS Trump. We're treated to a portrait of a man consumed by a job he does not care about, with multiple crises hanging over his head and his appointees pitted against each other in a struggle to survive. Trump's handler, Rudy Giuliani, even went so far as to pronounce that Trump's "time in office is going to be very intense, but it will be very short, because it will end on January 20th of 2021." When the CNN anchor pointed out that there were "real and significant dangers to
