Reusing multiple Logger instances within one Method I want to create a method that always takes the current date and time as parameters.
This Method must log any exceptions that occurs within its execution. My guess is that there's some kind of better way to use the Logger class. public static void MyMethod(DateTime when) { Logger _logger = Logger.Create("mylog"); try { doProcessing(when); } catch(Exception ex) { _logger.LogException(ex); } } Do I really have to create a new Logger instance in each try? I need to get a variable date as a parameter and then log everything I need to. Edit: Important note: I don't want to log a simple string message to the logfile. I want to log something like "Exception Occured" with DateTime as the parameter. I want to configure this method in code. public static void MyMethod(DateTime when) { Logger.Create("mylog"); // Here I want to reuse the same instance i.e. MyMethod(DateTime when), but I can't simply use the same instance again. try { doProcessing(when); } 595f342e71
