pdf 88 i really think it's you We will be happy to see you in our team. We are sure that you can be successful in our team. i was just saying...or not...,, by You can receive messages from our support specialists 24/7.Q: Calculating total from a field to display in another with formulas in Access The tables I have are Shows a user's name, address, phone number, name of location they are managing, and a maxdol they can manage. Addresses has a "master record" of each location, they will only change that record. The Locations has a "master record" of each property in the system, they will only change that record. I want the user to be able to figure out how many properties they have in the system, and add them up. I'm assuming it will be some combination of UNIONS and an aggregate function, but I'm not sure what kind to use. A: You'll use a query called something like: `SELECT tblAddresses.LocationID, Sum(tblAddresses.MaxDol) AS SumOfMaxDol FROM tblAddresses GROUP BY tblAddresses.LocationID HAVING Sum(tblAddresses.MaxDol) < 0` This will count how many people have maxdol less than 0. It will aggregate by LocationId, so that the counting you're interested in only happens for each location. It uses the function Sum, which tells MS Access to create an aggregate function out of a column called Sum. This is how you calculate a total. We use a WHERE clause to make sure the LocationID is non-zero, since otherwise no MaxDol will ever be less than zero. I've just declared the table tblAddresses, you'll need to fill that in with your data from the other tables, so that the other tables refer to the right table. Edward Poynter Edward Morris Poynter (1867-1959), was an Australian barrister, and botanist.
