A cohort of 53 Chinese children with severe aplastic anaemia (SAA) was treated with intravenous (i.v.) busulfan. The outcome of this study was similar to previous studies and in this study 33 of the 53 patients (62%) achieved complete remission. The cumulative probability of bone marrow transplant-related mortality at 5 years was 32% +/- 9%. The median age was 8 years. There was no statistical difference in the risk of treatment failure between the 5- and 7-year age groups (10/13 vs 2/8; P = 0.08). Patients who failed busulfan therapy had a higher relapse rate (6/9 vs 8/41; P = 0.03) and bone marrow transplant-related mortality (4/9 vs 9/41; P = 0.07). It is concluded that i.v. busulfan therapy alone for SAA in children in China is effective. Patients who fail busulfan therapy and those with central nervous system (CNS) disease are at risk of bone marrow transplant-related mortality.
