This program can display almost all the Google Map information and has a compact user interface allowing you to focus on what you want to see. You can also focus on your friends' locations without the hassle of constantly refreshing the map. MappingTool is an alternative for GoogleMaps or Openstreetmap, that can show and edit addresses or track your location, even if you are offline. It is based on the OpenStreetMap data and can be used by its own or with GoogleMaps. A new map is generated on-the-fly from the address string you entered, so you can edit and correct the existing map at any time. I recommend using the Google Maps API, it's one of the best for Web/RSS Map based maps. You don't even need to download a map, you can view it directly using JavaScript. There is a howto on how to set it up for offline map usage, but it assumes you are using a server side map. "Google Maps API 2 Street View" is now available. Street Views are generated by scouring the planet, using 24 times more satellites than before, from a new camera plane. It's now possible to view Street Views in many countries.
