Jakub Blaszczykowski, FIFA Lead Gameplay Programmer, EA SPORTS, on what you can expect from the game and HyperMotion Technology in FIFA 22: "At FIFA, we strive to deliver the biggest and best Football experience possible. We've been listening to feedback from both our players and our partners from the football industry as we fine-tune the game to make it the best possible football experience in the world. HyperMotion Technology is one of the most innovative technological advancements we've ever incorporated into the game and will change the way that fans engage with the game for years to come. We've incorporated input from 22 footballers to ensure that we've got the richest virtual experience possible. "This is the deepest version of the game yet. We've worked with our partner, the EA Sports Connected Football League, to mine the real-life football experience. EA's football league has been conducting surveys with 22,000 amateur and professional footballers to ensure that we're accurately replicating the most demanding matches, as well as delivering amazing new features and gameplay improvements. "FIFA will be the most authentic football game on the market for players new and old. We've created the most comprehensive and immersive Football experience of all time. We're a big believer that players will be excited to learn more about the developers that bring their favourite sport to life, and this is a good way to do that. We've worked with our partners at EA Sports Connected Football League and the Fifa World Football Tour to give players the chance to be more involved in FIFA development too. Players can earn rewards, earn a spot in the new Skill Progression System, or vote on new game modes in the upcoming beta." The Skill Progression System that will be available in the beta and final game is a new way to unlock new attributes, as well as increasing your overall skills. It allows players to build a Skill Level of gameplay to unlock new attributes. "The most asked for feature is the ability to create custom players and teams. EA SPORTS Connected Football league and the Fifa World Football Tour are working closely with FIFA developers to see what players need to be included. We can't wait to play the game when players can create their own custom legends in real life." More than half of the World Cup features

FIFA (Flughasligame Internasjonale, literally 'International Football'), is a series of sports video games for home and personal computers developed by EA Canada. The series is based on the FIFA Manager series of games. The latest installment is FIFA 20 which was released in 2017. FIFA gameplay FIFA gameplay is a football simulation game where players can participate in football matches using artificial intelligence or by controlling players on the computer. Matches consist of two teams of players each with their own set of physical attributes, equipment, formation and tactics. Players on the computer side are represented by algorithms which mimic the actions of human players, although they lack the ability to control the ball. The gameplay is realistic, with instant reactions, proper weight and speed, skill animations, dribbling, passing, shooting, headers and tackles. It was well received and the series is seen as one of the best soccer simulation video games in the genre, along with Konami's Pro Evolution Soccer series. Since the release of the 1st FIFA game in 1991, over 20 FIFA games have been released, with all but the first having been published by Electronic Arts. More recent games have all featured the EA Sports' FIFA series of games mechanic, leaving FIFA Manager and its members to only appear in older games. In 2009, the series' popularity declined and the new FIFA games did not experience the same success as their predecessors. FIFA 10 and 11 were not as successful as previous games, although FIFA 12 was regarded as a comeback for the series, seeing a general improvement in ratings. Other games in the series have been more successful, such as FIFA 99 and FIFA 14, selling over 9 million copies each. One of the most well-received innovations is the ability to play football matches in which the ball only moves through open goal area or the three penalty area. This added more realistic play, as it was possible to create goal scoring opportunities where a player would usually try to control the ball outside the goal area. Another innovation was the ability to play with teams with more than 20 players, rather than the maximum of 11 players. This caused some problems due to the large memory requirements needed, but was later solved by the introduction of the "Live Update" system which reduced the game's demands on memory and improved overall gameplay. The latest FIFA game, FIFA 20, was the first to use a new version of the FIFA series of games engine, and introduced the "Create- bc9d6d6daa
