CheckedShort-term supply of VLBW infants with bovine LTB4 improves macrophage-driven pulmonary inflammation.
Chorioamnionitis and gestational age are predictors of increased pulmonary air leak after birth in very preterm infants. LTB(4) is an important mediator of the inflammatory response to lung injury. In this randomized prospective study we hypothesize that the use of a low-dose systemic bolus of bovine LTB(4) during the first 48 h of life to immature infants will improve macrophage-driven lung inflammation. Twenty-seven newborn VLBW infants were included in the study. Infants received either 1 microg/kg bovine LTB(4) as a 3 h intravenous bolus (study group) or placebo (control group) within 2 h after admission to the NICU. Lung function and macrophage recruitment (both cellular and exudative) were evaluated on days 1 and 3. On day 3, a decreased air leak was detected in the study group (n = 13) compared to the control group (n = 14), with a trend towards more positive pleural fluid cultures (P = 0.05) but no differences in antibiotic treatment, length of hospital stay, mechanical ventilation, or outcomes. Infants in the study group showed a trend towards decreased arterial partial pressure of oxygen and increased peak inspiratory pressure. In a multiple regression model, bovine LTB(4) bolus and absolute blood eosinophil count were the only independent predictors of a decreased air leak. Infants receiving bovine LTB(4) during the first 48 h of life demonstrated a trend towards decreased air leak and improved oxygenation, associated with decreased eosinophil recruitment. Bovine LTB(4) might have a potential role in the treatment of pulmonary complications in infants born very preterm.

That is a great question. I am currently writing the third Alex & Sierra book, currently in the editing process. I want to say that our relationship is probably a bit like a marriage in the sense that you might expect bad things to happen, and bad or potentially ugly things will happen. But we are prepared for that. One of the things I will say is that having your first book published and getting a book deal, even early on, is a big deal. It is a big transition from the kind of life you are used to living. It is a life you have to lead differently. This was part of the process of why Alex & Sierra was written: to teach us how to lead our lives differently. We didn't know what that process would look like. We just knew we wanted to write the book. Once we decided to write the book, we sat down and took a good look at what we have been blessed with. We have this opportunity to teach young people about the flaws in the system. We talk to them about the pitfalls. We talk about the good stuff, but we also talk about what bad stuff can happen. If you take advantage of that good stuff, you can have a really awesome life. If you don't take advantage of the bad stuff, then you can have a really bad life.
