Q: Get Line by Line IF in a CSV File in Windows Phone 8 I have a file with one line per line. How can I access the line by line? I'm using the .NET OnApplovinCDMN. The file is this: "c:\users\F8@mail.com\Documents\Dados\Sentencias_Clavia.csv" I want to search if the line has "AT_01_TR" and get it with the condition "sentence". I have tried this code but it doesn't work { string path = "c:\Users\F8@mail.com\Documents\Dados\Sentencias_Clavia.csv"; StreamReader reader = null; reader = new StreamReader(path); string myLine; int i=0; while ((myLine = reader.ReadLine()) != null) { if (myLine.Contains("AT_01_TR")) { string sentence = myLine; } i++; } A: There is no need to use .NET, you can use the System.IO.FileInfo class and the Name property to get the file name of the path you have provided. using (var f = new FileInfo(@"c:\users\F8@mail.com\Documents\Dados\Sentencias_Clavia.csv")) { var myLine = f.Name; if (myLine.Contains("AT_01_TR")) { string sentence = myLine; } } From documentation The Name property returns the file's name, including the file extension. For the first time, scientists have measured nitrate concentrations in the surface waters of Lake Tahoe. The lake is a popular drinking water source for the North Lake Tahoe region, about 70 miles east of Sacramento, Calif. The study, published in the

What's New in the?

Our schools are not getting enough money and the government knows it. This, despite the fact that our "squandered" education system is a major factor in the lack of job prospects and a lack of investment in Scotland, which in turn leads to our failing public services and our poor economic performance. As schools across Scotland continue to budget deficits, beleaguered headteachers continue to struggle with teachers' pay, housing and the strain of trying to balance their books. But it's not just the school leaders that are struggling with budget pressures. The NSPCC is also concerned about the impact of inadequate funding for schools on the mental health of vulnerable children and young people, especially those in school-based social care. We are also concerned about the future of our existing schools. Many are failing to improve outcomes for children or have little prospect of closing. This is no longer acceptable. The failure to tackle schools' budget deficits is leaving parents in the poorest communities with nowhere to turn, which in turn is undermining social cohesion and families and leading to damaging outcomes in terms of health, employment and educational attainment. For decades, Scotland has made great strides in the investment and reform of the education system. Schools are now open for longer, with more pupils and parents using them. We have also started to see lower numbers of school leavers at age 15, and pupils doing well at Key Stage 4. But we must not forget that the problems in the schools system reach beyond exam results. The current funding settlement needs to prioritise children and young people, and the challenge for the next government will be to implement the full recommendations of the Murray Inquiry. Given the sheer amount of work required and the short-term nature of the current funding settlement, it will not be easy. There will be winners and losers among the different groups in the education system, especially at primary and secondary level, in particular our most vulnerable children. But we should not be afraid to try. The reality is that with an 8% increase in school funding over five years, we can offer pupils a far better education than has been available in the past. Education is critical in transforming Scotland, but we cannot do it alone. Investment in affordable childcare and housing for the poorest families would be a good start. A commitment to energy-efficient infrastructure and social housing, including homes fit for purpose for pupils and staff, would also be a positive step.
